Background Information

The City of Indianapolis receives funding from HUD for the development and continuation of affordable housing. Annually, the City of Indianapolis receives approximately 13.3 million dollars to help with this effort. The Consolidated Plan is a five-year plan that sets goals and strategies for using those funds to help with affordable housing and community development efforts. From 2015 until 2019, the City of Indianapolis expects to receive 66 million dollars to invest in the community from HUD.

As part of this funding, the federal government mandates a review of impediments to fair housing choice in the private and public sectors. This is the Analysis of Impediments to Fair Housing Choice (AI) for the City of Indianapolis. It is a new document, examining the housing choices for residents living in the City of Indianapolis. The last AI was published in 2010. This document serves to both fulfill the requirements set by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) and steer the City of Indianapolis as it develops multiple plans for future development.

Federal regulations do not require a formal approval of this document by HUD to be compliant; however, the document must include:

• A review of the City of Indianapolis’ laws, regulations, administrative policies and planning;
• An analysis of how those laws affect the placement and development of housing;
